The financial cost of unhappiness at work is in excess of $550 billion per year because 69% of the American workforce is disengaged. We also see increasing workplace hostility, discrimination, harassment, workforce division, miscommunication, and the #MeToo movement. Since 2000, over $1 billion in settlements have been paid to unhappy employees.

Millennials, Generation Z, minorities, women and men are questioning the current system's effectiveness, both because it operates with an outdated code of workplace politics and hierarchies and because of its perceived focus on only profits. This old code has not been updated to reflect the changing values in business culture today, which must, necessarily, include all team members. His old code is at the breaking point, NOW, and her new code is emerging.

In this presentation Beate will show your audience:

- What the old code is costing businesses
- How to skyrocket an organization's People ROI
- > The five elements required for diverse and equal team building
- How to master the three essential female-centric leadership attributes and leverage them in synergy with male-centric attributes
- Which viewpoints and innovative ideas are often missed and what to do about it

Your audience takeaway is understanding how to take the first step in transforming employee engagement, and how that will improve overall financial performance of their organization.

Beate Chelette is the Growth Architect® and founder of the Women's Code®. She has been named one of fifty mustfollow women entrepreneurs by HuffPost. A first-generation immigrant who found herself $135,000 in debt as a single parent, she bootstrapped her passion for photography into a highly-successful global business and eventually sold it to Bill Gates in a multimillion-dollar deal.

Beate is engaging, funny and has shared her insights on leadership and business development with thousands of women, leaders, businesses, entrepreneurs who want to move purposefully toward balanced, genderneutral leadership.
